Concerned Men and Women Dedicated to Gentle Use of California Trails and Backcountry

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

How soon summer is coming to a close. As I write this article here at Big Meadows, I am reminded we are so fortunate to have all this wonderful country in our back yard. This past summer we have made trips to Edison, Chamberlaine Camp, a ride at Tamarack and of course, Big Meadows. Thanks to all who continue to support our efforts to keep trails open for all to ride. We have picked up new members this year and I say welcome to you and thank you for choosing to be a part of this unit as well as those who continue to be a part year after year.

I hope to see many of you at our October 18th General Meeting. We will have elections as well as a special speaker. I also hope to see you at our Christmas dinner where we will gather to celebrate the year as well as catch up with old friends and meet some new ones.

I would like to say a Big Thanks to two special groups of people who keep your unit going, your board of directors and the Big Meadow Committee. These two groups make my job so much easier.

Remember to stay in the saddle, the ground is hard,
Joe Kaminski
President

Working hard wherever he goes!

Chamberlaine Back in the Saddle Again

By: Melanie Mackenzie
Sept. 14, 2017

The air was crisp, new made and cool. Traces of alfalfa with hints of manure for spice mingled with the clean scent of the pines and rain-wet ground. Closing my eyes I filled my lungs deeply, reveling in the moment. It had been so long... Grabbing up the reins, I placed my left foot in the stirrup and pulling on the horn I stepped up and swung my leg over the cantle and planted my other boot firmly in the stirrup. Heels down...check; reins in left hand...check. Annie "my" paint horse for the trip, stood stone still. "Good girl", I told her as I leaned over and stroked her shoulder. Her brown ears flicked back to listen, then swung forward again intent on the other horses. I looked around at the tall pines, fleecy clouds and blue sky as the others mounted. I grinned at the sheer joy of being here on horseback again after more than two decades. Smiling to myself, I remembered how I got here...

It was September of last year when I walked into Cara Peterson's Blueprint Express to get a few prints for a job I was designing. After the printing was done, I turned to leave, and she said,

"Hey, Melanie...". I turned back. "yea?". "I just got back from the Shaver Lake Poker Run Ride organized by the BCHC San Joaquin Sierra Unit. I nodded... "Well", she continued, "I won the raffle for a pack trip for four to Chamberlain BCHC Camp up in the high sierras. Joe and Carol Kaminski will be the hosts – three days and two nights, meals and everything!... you want to go with me?"

I was speechless, overwhelmed by the offer, but only for a moment. "YEA!" I shouted, elated! "Really...me? you want to take me?" "Of course", she replied, as her face cracked with a grin. I shook my head with disbelief and hugged her. "I'm totally blown away and so excited! When do we go?" I asked. "Oh," she said, "we have plenty of time to plan; it's not until next September 7-9th." "OK! I'm so on that, thank you, thank you, thank you!" Then I remembered, deflated, "but Cara, I don't have a horse anymore!" "Don't worry, I'll find you one." She reassured me. We hugged and both beamed at each other as I left.

So that was how, a year later in the pre-dawn, I found myself catching, grooming and helping to load up the horses, mules and tack needed for our trip. It was here, in the cool hour before dawn that I met Cara's other guests, Jim Dixon and Warner Dozier and Jim's excellent stock we were using for the trip. I listened intently and did my best to follow Jim and Warner's lead and instructions. It may have been 25 years, but it was all coming back to me. Maybe you never really forget if you grow up ranching. We all stood around a moment savoring our coffee and watched as Cara put her big dun, Eli on the lunge line for a few circles around the bull pen - just to get the kinks out. Soon, all the stock was groomed and loaded. Time to head out, but first we bent our heads in prayer.

Jim and Warner led the way as Cara and I hopped in her truck. Grinning at each other, she fired up the rig and we threaded our way through the dusty pot holes of John and Pat's ranch road, hit the highway and headed up the mountain.

We drove slowly up through incense cedar, pine, dogwood and Spruce. We broke out of the trees and entered a clearing floating across the low ground fog. A small grove of Sequoias greeted us briefly as we wound our way up the mountain.

At the trail head, Joe and Carol Kaminski were waiting for us with big smiles and open arms. They had camped there overnight. We unloaded our stock, and set out feed. I found myself standing around and went and introduced myself to Joe and Carol and helped them groom and water their stock. We saddled the horses and packed the mules with care. Now were all mounted and ready to set forth on our adventure. Jim set the order. Warner straddled the creamello, Luke, to lead; next Cara on Eli; than me on my sweet paint, Annie. Bringing up the rear was Jim on Lagsi, the Icelandic, towing the mules - Heidi and Toby - laden with our gear.

The line started forward and the silent forest engulfed us. Behind us the trail head and civilization disappeared.

Rocks, logs and creeks we crossed without a hitch. Annie was a dream to ride, light mouthed and sure footed, we got along just fine. But, when we met a few four-wheelers and hikers along the trail, it was those distractions that quickly taught me (the nube) the importance of keeping our stock going forward in order, the proper distance apart and what teamwork it takes to keep the line properly spaced and moving together so as not scatter off in all directions. This was totally new to me – REAL mountain trail riding within a pack train. And I reveled in the challenge. To soon I got my first glimpse of Chamberlain camp (complete with a 100 year old log cabin) home for the next few days.

I've backpacked and primitive camped my whole life so setting up camp is routine. But this was my first pack trip and I had a whole new skill set to master: how to un-pack the mules; highlines: nose bags; the order to feed the stock; hauling water; wire wall pasture fencing; getting all the stock to the pasture without a ruckus; etc. , challenging work but oh so rewarding. Watching the herd interact loose in the pasture was fascinating and hilarious, as the herd hierarchy established itself. Once all the livestock had been pastured, watered, groomed, grained and set up on the highline for the night, we all realized just how hungry we were! Fortunately, Joe and Carol and taken care of that and a warm fire and delicious dinner awaited us. I do believe those were the tastiest scalloped potatoes I ever eaten. Bless you Carol!

And the stories, oh the stories around the campfire! These old friends had a new face with whom share their stories – some funny, some sad along with some amazing stories of search and rescues that Jim and Warner had participated in over the long years of their friendship. What a bond they share! I felt honored and blessed to be included in the telling of it all.

All too soon my eyes were drooping, I said my good nights and thank yous, and I wandered over to my tent and hunkered down in my bag. Sleep was slow to come as my mind kept rolling over the events of the day and the ride to come in the morning. And even though I could never find the sleep number dial on that sleeping pad I somehow drifted off to sleep whispering my gratitude for the blessings I was enjoying.

I awoke to the nickering of the stock. Pulled on my frosty jeans and scrambled out of my tent. Jim, Cara and Warner had already started last night's routine with the stock all over again. But now, I knew the drill. That done, we saddled all the horses and set up the mules. The mules had no gear to bear this time, but they would be heartbroken at being left behind. Everybody went back on the highline.

Now it was our turn. At the camp table, we bowed our heads and asked for the Lord's blessing today and sat down to a feast. We all stuffed ourselves with bacon, eggs and biscuits and gravy, and lots of cowboy coffee. Prayers, food and coffee - a most excellent start for our foray up the mountain.

Warner and Jim rolled out the 1 mile quadrangle maps across the rustic log table and we all went over possible trail options and destinations. Jim had his GPS radio to maintain contact with Joe and Carol at the base camp. He showed us how to use it and reviewed safety precautions and "what ifs" and what to do. I was confident I was in good hands. Although I'm not so sure that they felt that way about me and my mad skills!

We mounted our horses, same order as yesterday, and Jim grabbed the tow line for the mules. Joe and Carol smiled and waved as we wound our way out of camp and up the trail.

Today was the Big Ride up the mountain. And UP we went. The horses and mules faltered not as we clattered and climbed up the steep rock steps. Their hooves unerringly found their way through loose cobbles, across slippery glacier polished rock faces and creeks with no hesitation. What heart! Jim, behind me on Lagsi, reminded me, "easy now, hold up". "OK Jim, I got it." I'd reply, or "sorry!" when I got too far ahead. He was patiently teaching me to pay attention to forward and back so as to maintain the balance and perfect distance between Eli, Anne and Lagsi . What a horseman! We were all a team, and in spite of the novice (me!) it was working well.

After scaling the steps we wound our way through the breathtaking forest and meadows of the high country, my head on a swivel to take it all in. We met a few startled back packers, who courteously stepped to the side of the trail. One hiker and his friend watched us pass and called out to Jim, "Hey, why doesn't that last mule carry anything?" "Well," Jim replied, "We're saving him to bring back anyone we find hurt!" I smiled, shook my head and wondered what that young man must have been scratching his head about that response.

At the top of the first grade we headed North west at the "Y" onto trail but deadfall stopped us. Warner drew rein and raised his hand and called out, "Stop – Hold" as the trail was blocked. When the line stopped and the animals settled, Jim called "can you find a way around it?" "I'll go ahead and look" Warner yelled back, "Wait here". He and Luke broke brush to see if he could find an open path back to the trail. He returned shortly shaking his head. "Deadfall all over up here, Jim, we gotta turn back. Let's head back to the Y and see if that trail is clear." Jim nodded. Warner and Luke led the line in a U-turn, he found the "Y" and we headed on to that trail. It was clear. Jim called base to update them as to our location and new route. And we continued on thorough the forest.

We watered the horses at a creek crossing and soon found a perfect meadow for lunch. For everybody! We hobbled Annie, the matriarch of the herd and let the stock loose to graze. Lunch was dug out from our saddlebags. Bacon, apples, trail bars, even a bit of Tri Tip! - all good things. We caught the horses and mules – they hadn't wandered far as that meadow was far too tasty to leave. We mounted and headed out. A few more miles breathtaking splendor and it was time to turn for home. The horses picked up the pace (funny how they ALWAYS know when you're heading home). As we back tracked along the trail we sang songs the whole way back.

As we headed toward camp I pondered my childhood and adolescence growing up on the horse ranch. It was all about breeding, training, horse shows along with trailering Mom's race horses to tracks up and down the state of California. But even then, what I most enjoyed was the simple pleasure of climbing up on my big black gelding, Bo Jangles, with my friend Brooke on her strawberry roan mare, July, whistling up the dogs and hitting the trails on the surrounding cattle ranches. It was wonderful and I am deeply grateful for that time and the gift my parents gave me. But I got to tell you that this experience of mountain trail riding has totally eclipsed those past experiences. Words are a poor substitute for the sheer JOY I felt within this community of amazing people and incredible animals while surrounded by some of the most scenic mountain terrain in the world. It is an unbeatable combination and one I will not soon forget.

Toby's Meadow Eli and Me

By Cara Peterson
9'8'17

Toby's Meadow is the place to be,
Just hanging out, Eli and Me.
In the Sierra's,
That's where we'll meet,
With squishy sand soil, just under our feet.
Before and after a six mile stretch,
The horses graze heartily,
then comes time to fetch.
Back to the highline for one more night,
I'll sneak to the creek, just out of sight.
He gets a blanket, a bucket, a treat,
I get a meal that can't be beat.
And from the table, I look at him,
He's staring back at me again.
A log for a chair at a place to inspire,
As friends draw near to a warming camp fire.
Mule pads for a bed, is just what I need,
All that comfort, not to exceed.
As I lie awake at night,
I ponder, no mosquito bite.
I know of Jesus, and the armies of heaven,
All riding horses and dressed in fine linen.
Only this rider, is faithful and true.
He wages war and judges too.
I will give thanks for the woods and such,
Prayers for safety are never too much.
It's hard to sleep but that's O.K.,
Just thinking about my ride today.
With singing and joy on that stair stepping trail,
We took some good pictures to send them email.
Toby's Meadow, my favorite of course,
Eli and Me,
The most beautiful horse!

Chamberlain Beginning Pack Trip

Hey cool, fun time: a little work and a little packing instruction. Submitted by Randy Witt

I am always amused when we call these things work parties when we are sitting around a campfire eating delicious food at the end of the day. When we have done a little bit of work in a beautiful setting it's hard to think of it as work. On August 24, Pete Perkins, Carol and Joe Kaminski, Fredi Chrisman, and Randy Witt headed in to Chamberlain Meadows camp behind Courtright Reservoir. After somewhat setting up camp, setting up the electric fence in the meadow and putting the stock out for feeding, we were relaxing just a little bit and thinking about getting dinner ready. Thankfully, Joe heard a disturbance down in the meadow and went to check it out. He immediately discovered the horses had gotten jammed up and gone through the fence and down the trail. All the stock. He called for help and he and Carol immediately follow the tracks. I was changing my shoes into something so I could walk all night if necessary. As I headed down the trail, Joe and Carol had come upon the stock A quarter or half mile away and had sent them back up the trail. the entire herd came running back up towards me, my horse came directly to me and stopped, along with his mules. The rest of the stock headed up towards camp and Fredi and Pete collected most of them with the feed bag. After my worst imaginable nightmare of searching for stock all night long in the dark, I settled in, had a drink and Carol and Fredi finished cooking up dinner for us. I was thanking my lucky stars.

The next morning as Carol, Fredi and I went out to pick up Jim and Doug and their gear at the trailhead, Joe got to work finishing up a huge Paul Bunyan-sized picnic table, Fashioned from downed logs in the area. At the trailhead, Doug and Jim Lamer were waiting for us with all their gear spread out, ready to be packed up. Since these guys wanted to learn the basics of mule packing, I set out having them balance the loads into soft panniers, weighing them, loading them up and lashing it down. As I modeled each step of the process, each of them tried their hand at each part of The loading process. Of course lashing the load is always the trickiest part to learn. With little delay, we headed out for Chamberlain camp which is only about a one hour, easy ride. After unloading and detacking the stock, it was very convenient to just tie the stock to one of the 12 or 14 rings our club has attached to an enormous log, for that very purpose, on the edge of camp. While we were out picking up Jim and Doug, Joe had rearranged the electric fence in the meadow to better contain the stock. Jim and Doug set out for Courtright reservoir to try their luck fishing. They came back a few hours later with a couple of good-sized trout. Another great dinner in the mountains wrapped up the day.

Saturday, after some delicious breakfast burritos, I started packing Fredi's and my stuff up, as we both had to be back to town Saturday. Pete and Joe completed the work on the picnic table, and Jim and Doug went out for more successful fishing. The rest of the crew came out on Sunday and headed for home after a very pleasant, and successful "work party".

In conclusion, I would like to thank Carol and Joe for all the work they put into shopping and preparing all the meals. As well, I would like to remind everyone of the fine and very comfortable pit toilet and solar shower the club built over the last couple of years. That building makes your stay very comfortable. I recommend to all of our members that they can even make Chamberlain Meadows an easy day ride destination for a picnic or light camping.

August General Meeting

Horse Shoes, Horse Shoes, Horse Shoes: Hi there everyone!

If you attended the last SJS Unit General Meeting on August 16th at the Clovis Elks Club, you now know what a great meeting it was. If you missed it, you missed a FANTASTIC GENERAL MEETING. What is so fantastic about a general meeting you ask? Well I'll tell you. Horse Shoes!!!

We learned all about Horse Shoes, Hoof Care, Horse Shoeing Tools, and how to react to a hoof problem in the backcountry. We also learned what to do and what not to do with your horse prior to going to the mountains. We were all taught and entertained by Jerry Jones, MASTER HORSE SHOER. We also learned the difference between a Farrier and a horse shoer.

There were about 25 of us at the meeting, and we all felt Jerry presented a lot of valuable information. Jerry is a local guy, having grown up here in the Valley, and now lives in Auberry. He is an experienced rider and packer. In fact, he is a past World Champion Packer at Bishop Mule Days. He currently is one of the judges at Mule Days. We had many good discussions about horses and hoof care, usually as a result of a question by one of the group.

Thank you Jerry! Welcome to the new members who were at the meeting. At this moment I am not able to recall their names but think they were the Castaneda, Lopez and Flores families. During a break, we had some great tasting desserts provided by the Unit. I think desserts and/or coffee and soft drinks will be a regular thing as long as our general meetings are at the Elks Club.

Special Unit Ride

Our unit had our first annual Dianna Sorensen Memorial ride at Tamarack Ridge on August 4th and 5th. The weather was beautiful, the trails were not too dusty, the scenery was gorgeous, the food was terrific, and sleeping under the stars was out of this world. Various people did various rides: some rode to the meadow; some to the top of Bald Mountain; some to the creek; and some rode their easy chair in camp all weekend. We all had a relaxing time. Thanks to the board of directors for organizing this fantastic and meaningful event. The early birds started arriving on Wednesday and Thursday. I believe they wanted to get out of the Valley heat. Randy Witt and I thought we would be early and arrive Friday at noon. Actually, Randy wanted to put some miles on his pack train of mules, so he and I stopped and saddled up before arriving at the group camp. This was not a specified "ponying ride" so Randy and the mules stayed out of the camp area and put some miles on the mules in the creek, across the creek, across the meadow, between the trees and down the trail. After our training ride, Randy went home, and I went to set up camp.

Once camp was set up, it was time for another ride to the meadow...this time with Duane and Peter. Friday night dinner was every one on their own. Saturday breakfast was kind of good, so I had three helpings to decide just how good it was...it was very, very good!! Thank you cookies! During the day, different people took different rides, but to me the highlight of the day was the ride to the top of Bald Mountain. There was a large group of us on the ride, but the dust at the back of the group was minimal. Once at the top of Bald Mountain the view was spectacular. We were met by 3 different jeeps and their occupants. Some of us choose to climb up into the look out tower while a fellow rider held our pony. The ride back to camp was really a special one for me. I got to relax and have a long conversation with a friend and fellow rider.

Saturday evening's meal was special, yes, the group food was great, as usual, but there was a very special feeling in the air, and the whole group could feel it. It was the real reason we were there...Dianna and her memorial ride. A drawing was held and a Dianna Sorensen Memorial Ride belt buckle was given to the raffle winner, Glenda Jacobsen. She lives in Prather. Paul Sorensen was also given an identical buckle, for which he was so humble and thankful. Paul you are the man! I so admire you. You conducted yourself with such grace and dignity throughout the entire weekend. What a privilege to call you friend and a fellow member of the unit. This ride was a huge success in many ways, one of which was the attendance. There were about 25 members there. Here is my attempt to list those that were there. Please excuse the misspellings and anyone I forgot: Joe & Carol Kamin-ski, Paul Sorensen, Peter Parkin, Pat & Duane Peverill, James & Doug Laber, Ted Fischer, Katie Horst, Fredi Chrisman, Jaedyn Traeger, Andrea & Chris Castaneda, Abel & Esmeralda Lopez, Eli & Johnny Flores, Al Castaneda, Al & Cynthia Castaneda, Glenda Jacobsen, Diana & Nicholas Meigs, Richard Hall, Gaby Kant, Paul Barile, Hanah Rousey and Dustin McMurry.

Thank you to all who attended.... YOU made this a ride to remember.

Backcountry Cooks

FROM PAT PEVERILL

Oven Baked Sweet Potato Fries

Makes Four Servings

1/2 teaspoon ground cumin

1/2 teaspoon salt

1/8 teaspoon ground red pepper

1 tablespoon vegetable oil

2 large (about 1-1/2 lbs) sweet potatoes

1. Prepare the sweet potatoes: In a small bowl combine cumin, salt and pepper. Set aside. Pre-heat oven to 400 degrees F. Peel potatoes, cut each in half lengthwise and cut each half into 6 wedges. In a large bowl, combine the cut potatoes, oil and spice mixture. Toss until potatoes are evenly coated. 2. Bake the fries: On a baking sheet, arrange potatoes in a single layer and place on the middle shelf of the oven. Bake until edges are crisp and potatoes are cooked.

The Lighter Side of the Barn

A man has a racehorse who never won a race. In disgust the man says, "Horse, you win today or you will be pulling a milk wagon tomorrow morning."

The starting gate opens, the horses take-off, they move the gate away and there lays his horse asleep on the track.

He kicks the horse and asks, "Why on earth are you sleeping?", The horse, half asleep says, "I have to get up at three in the morning."

Peter Parkin Pipeline

Things to think about this winter. Winter is coming and sometimes we forget about our “fur kids” that are outside. Just like you, you need to take care of them as you would take care of yourself. Here are just a few thoughts:

1. Don't let their water freeze over. They must stay hydrated.
2. Increase their feed rations when temperatures drop. But do not overfeed.
3. Make some time to exercise them. Just like you. You and they need to be active.
4. Don't override a horse that is not in shape just because the weather is good outside.
5. Horse/Mules are outdoor animals and will stay healthier if let outside. But you do need to try and protect them from severe weather.
6. Don't over blanket
7. Just because you're not riding, don't forget proper Hoof Care.
8. Don't just throw your horse out to pasture and forget about him until the sun warms up. Don't forget your daily chores and connection with your horse.
9. Don't forget about your health. Have a great winter and hope to see you on the trails.
